Our School and Community

Schalmont Central School District, located in New York's Capital Region, proudly serves families in Schenectady, Albany and Montgomery counties.

The district educates approximately 1,900 students from kindergarten through 12th grade in our three school buildings – Jefferson Elementary School, Schalmont Middle School and Schalmont High School.

Schalmont High School offers our roughly 600 students a strong academic foundation with numerous electives, extracurricular activities and other opportunities. Schalmont produces scholar-athlete teams, accomplished artists, award-winning musicians and civic-minded young adults who often volunteer their time to help their community.

Schalmont enjoys strong support from our community including parents, alumni, businesses, and other community members and organizations.

Distinctions

Schalmont High School graduates approximately 150 students a year and has a 4-year graduation rate of 92%, per the latest New York State Education Department data.

In addition to a core curriculum aligned to New York State standards, Schalmont High School students have access to opportunities such as a pre-engineering program, distance learning and a range of electives.

The program of studies at the high school also offers students robust enrichment options in a variety of honors, Advanced Placement and college-level coursework.

Schalmont High School partners with SUNY Schenectady County Community College, Rochester Institute of Technology, the University at Albany, and Syracuse University to offer courses and programs that introduce students to college-level curriculum. Students also have the opportunity to earn college credits through these relationships.

In 2022 Schalmont was included in a list of Best School Districts in the Capital Region, ranking #14 by the website Niche based on factors such as state test scores, SAT/ACT scores, college/career readiness, graduation rates and teacher quality.

Schalmont is a District in Good Standing, per New York State, based on the district demonstrating success in all performance goals.
